SO I GET TO TRAP UP IN BEAVER VALLEY... THE RICHEST FUR COUNTRY IN THE WEST.

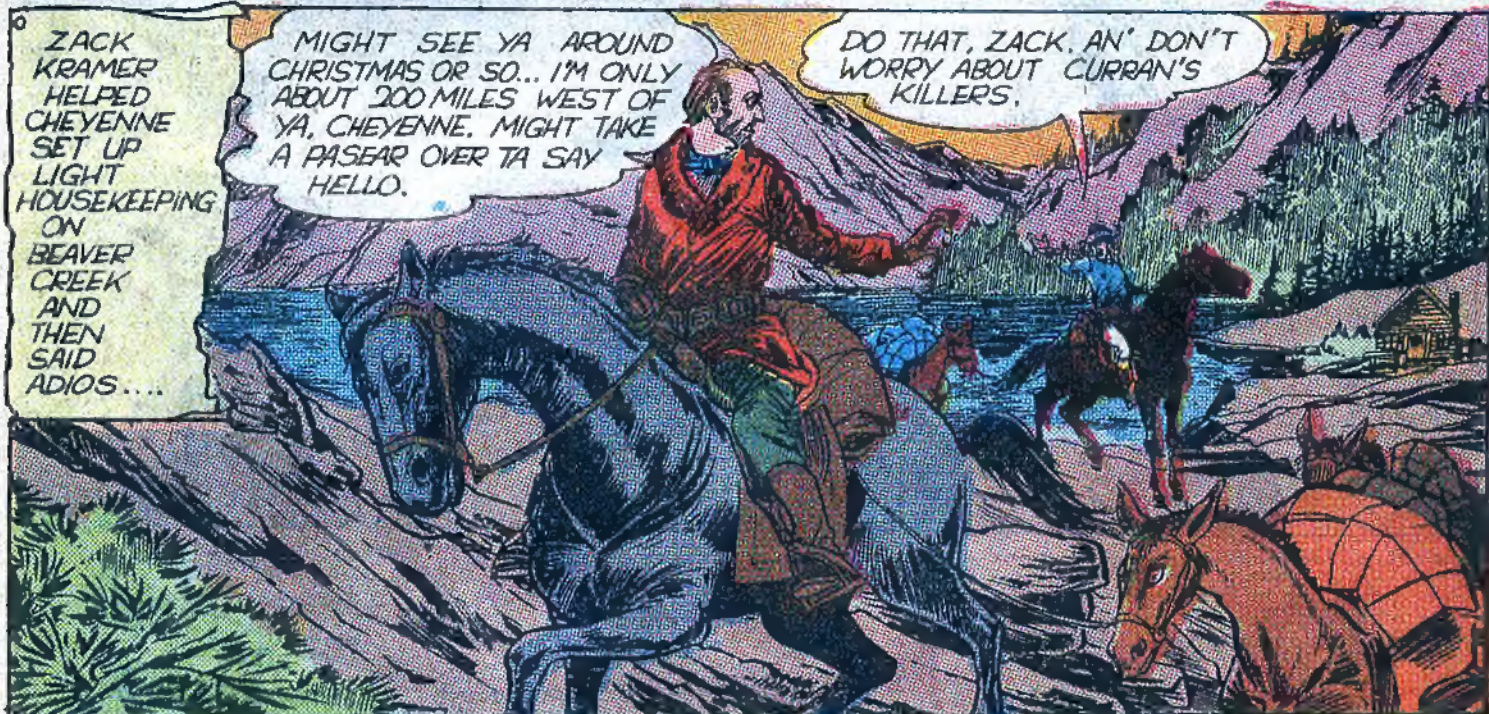

I'LL HAVE ME A PASSEL O' FURS... AN' FOR SURE CAT CURRAN'S KILLERS WILL COME AFTER 'EM WHEN THE WINTER'S ABOUT OVER!

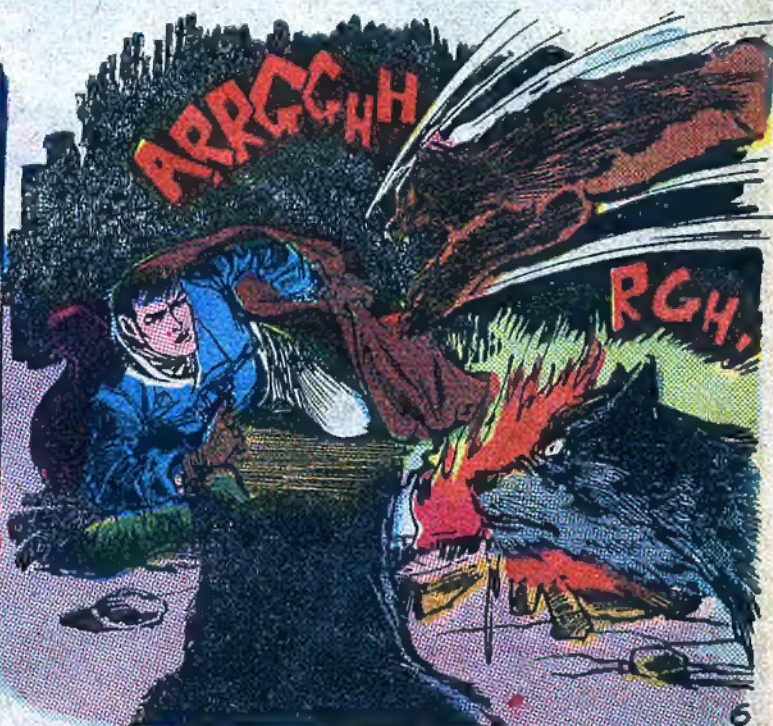

ZACK KRAMER HELPED CHEYENNE SET UP LIGHT HOUSEKEEPING ON BEAVER CREEK AND THEN SAID ADIOS....

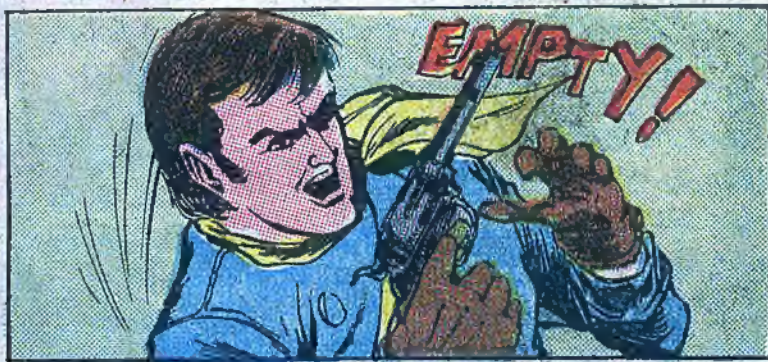

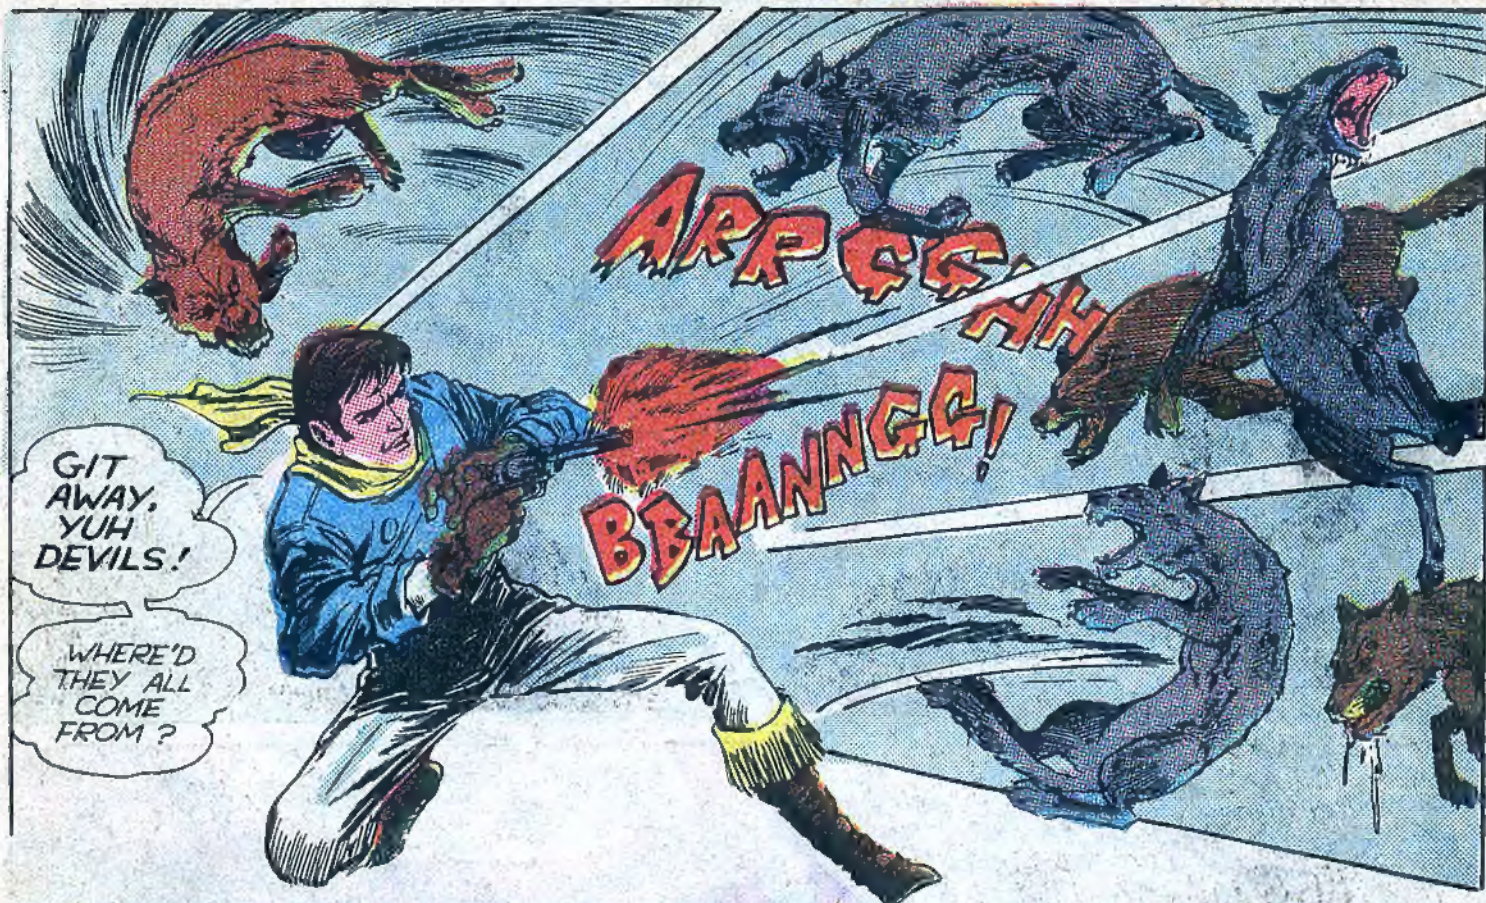

MIGHT SEE YA AROUND CHRISTMAS OR SO... I'M ONLY ABOUT 200 MILES WEST OF YA, CHEYENNE. MIGHT TAKE A PASSEAR OVER TA SAY HELLO.

DO THAT, ZACK. AN' DON'T WORRY ABOUT CURRAN'S KILLERS.

BUT THERE WERE OTHER KILLERS THAT WINTER....

NEXT MORNING, HEADING BACK FOR CAMP.....
THE CHEYENNE KID DISCOVERED THE REASON
WHY SEVEN STARVING WOLVES HAD JUMPED HIM, A MAN..... WHEN EASIER PREY ABOUNDED.

THE DEPUTY SHERIFF'S CORNER

Come on, you Western fans, and get ready for something New! We have asked an Old Timer to give us a hand. He still has his deputy sheriff's badge, can ride a horse, shoot his rifle or six-gun, trail a man, and most of all he knows his West. He will write a special column for this publication. It will consist of answers to questions you may send him about the Old West. Make it brief and to the point. There will be no personal replies. But from your letters one will be chosen to be answered in this column in every issue of this publication.

Dear Deputy Sheriff:

Each day I watch a very exciting Western series on T.V. Well, in one episode they had the hero ride a camel through the desert. I asked my teacher about this, and he said once we did have camels brought to this country. So I looked it up in the index of some history books, but could find nothing about camels. Can you please tell me if this is correct? And also any further information you can give me. I will then read it to the students in my class.

Dan L.

Hi Pardner!

The answer is yes — we did have camels in this country. And one of the most unusual jobs fell to a former Navy Lieutenant, Edward F. Beale, who in the middle of the 19th century was made commander of the United States' first and only camel corps. The camels had been purchased in the Levant by one of Beale's kinsman — Lieutenant D.D. Porter, who later became an Admiral. He brought the animals to Indianola, Texas, in a Navy ship. It seems that Jefferson Davis ordered the importation of the camels after he became Secretary of War in 1853. When the Navy ship landed at Indianola, Lieutenant Porter and the Navy relinquished responsibility for the camels. They were then taken to Camp Verde, Texas, near San Antonio.

Lieutenant Beale had actually left the Navy and it was to this camp that he went under orders to test the camel's capabilities and at the same time survey a wagon route west. The expedition had trouble right at the start. Although the camels were their usual docile selves, they frightened mules and made troubles for the drivers. Difficulties were also encountered when men not accustomed to loading camels took a lot of time at the job. And also loaded the animals so heavily they could hardly walk.

Once the caravan was underway, matters improved. The camels showed remarkable endurance over a route which was frequently covered with fine, flinty gravel. The camels were also content to eat anything — even dry greasewood bushes and prickly pears. Their ability to go without water for long periods kept them in good condition. While the mules were in danger of perishing in the desert heat.

Beale and his camels eventually arrived in Los Angeles. Within a year, he had conducted a party from the Gulf of Mexico to the Pacific. Through unknown country inhabited principally by hostile Indians. He had tested the value of the camels and marked a new road to the Pacific without losing a man.

When Beale reported the results of his research to the War Department, the Secretary recommended that Congress purchase 1,000 camels for use in the Southwest. However, the clouds of civil war were gathering on the horizon. Ownership of the camels seesawed between Union and Confederate forces. Neither of which took advantage of the camel's remarkable endurance. Alas, their end wasn't too happy. Some were sold and even ended up in circuses. Others were put to work for which they weren't fitted.

Mention should be made of one Hadji Alik who came with the camels to this country. And he remained here. And over his grave is a small statue of a camel. All I can tell you is that in my lifetime the last poor camel faded from this country! Who knows how different history might have been, had the camels really been used here as "ships of the desert." So you go tell your teacher and the class that it is true history — and not fiction — about having camels in this country.

The background of the cover features a muscular, metallic character with a dark, segmented body and a spiked collar. He is shown from the waist up, with his right arm raised and clenched into a fist. His arm is encased in a dark, segmented sleeve. The background is a fiery orange and red, with yellow lightning bolts and broken chains scattered around. The character's face is partially visible on the left side of the cover, showing a metallic, segmented texture.
